

DRAFT BOWL FOR INDEPENDENCE HALL

This is the bowl and its accompanying paraphernalia from which the numbers of registered men were drawn in Washington to decide the order in which men would be chosen for the new United States army. The bowl and other articles will be placed near the Liberty Bell in Independence Hall, the birthplace of American liberty, as a permanent exhibit. Besides the bowl the picture shows the wooden spoon used to stir the capsules containing the numbers, a tumbler of capsules before they were opened and several of the opened slips which were picked out of the bowl by officials at the beginning of the drawing.

CITY STREET DANCING WILL NOT BE STOPPED

Change of Ruling Announced at Stinger Park Community "Sing" Last Night

Municipal dances on roped-off streets will be continued this year in spite of a general understanding to the contrary, according to announcement made last night at the community "sing" at Stinger Park. Thirty-third and Reed streets, by Assistant City Forester Harry Gehman, who has charge of the music. The report of the prohibition of the street dancing and the substitution of community singing was circulated following the return to duty on the police boat Reuben of Sergeant Theodore Penn, who has charge of the dancing. In spite of the "no dancing" understanding, there were many hundreds present at the band concert and "sing" last night. Jere Shaw, soloist of the Municipal Band, led in the singing. Leaders with the words of national hymns and old songs were circulated among the crowd. According to Mr. Gehman the program of the concerts throughout the summer will open with the community singing and close with the dance. The purpose of the singing, it was explained, is to keep before the public the patriotic music with which every one should be familiar in war time. The advisory committee, which is encouraging the community singing, consists of Mayor Smith, Edward Bok, Alexander Van Rensselaer, Cyrus H. K. Curtis, E. T. Stensbury, Samuel S. Fels, Theodore Presser and E. A. Van Valkenburg.

TOM TAKES TO DRINK AND BEATS UP FANNIE

All of Which Is Not So Important as the Beautiful "Shots" in "Her Strange Wedding"

By the Photoplay Editor

RUBY—"Her Strange Wedding," Leaky-Paranoid, with Fannie Ward, Story by George Middleton, Scenario by Charles Maigne, Directed by George Melford. Photographed by Percy Hilburn.

Those weak hearts, which, by the way, are always the exclusive possessions of rotters and cads—what would the movie writers do without them? No slacker trying to dodge draft duties ever worked his ventricle so much as Tom Forman, who is in the early part of this film. As seen as the picture-wise fans saw him clutch at his breast, they knew it was only a question of time and footage before he would be a drunk, wife-beating, Tom would topple over, and good, sober, Fannie Ward loving Jack Dean would step into Tom's unworthy shoes. However, and fortunately for the high artistic name of Leaky, what the authors didn't do for this very weak sister of a story the director did. Not only did he offer beautifully dimmed and variegated interior lightings, but he disclosed some fine long shots of a coast and excellent close-ups of Miss Ward and her co-players. As usual, she was adequately emotional and Tom Forman, as always, was real and ingratiating. But Mr. Dean's place is not in the scope of the camera, at least while he insists on letting his hair grow some inches beyond the permissible line and on playing youthful lovers.

The Ruby showed yesterday another O. Henry filmetta, founded on one of the best of the late Mr. Porter's artificial series of various, as distinguished from his more spontaneous works. This was "The Gifts of the Magi," in which the situations are worked out with almost too mathematical precision to be convincing. But Vitaphone has caught the real O. Henry spirit of word and episode in these two reels, and they are always very easy to watch. There are signs of padding in this one—a fault that is even less excusable in a short film than in a ten-reel spectacle, though far less annoying. Patsy De Forrest and William Dunn ably recreate the characters of the wife and husband who sell their respective hair and watch to buy respectively a watch-chain and comb for one another.

Heavens! D. W. Griffith, heard from at last, though very faintly. The great producer is reported by Variety, which is generally more accurate than most persons will admit, to be doing a "big picture" with Lillian and Dorothy in London. Society women, the dispatch adds, have lent their charms to the film. A garden party "shot" lately included such famous women as Lady Paget, Lady Brougham, the Princess of Monaco and Miss Elizabeth Asquith. The picture referred to is a new feature. It's more likely that the English scenes are to form part of the great war photoplay on which Griffith has been ensconced on the Franco-British front.

Thirty New Stores Added to the American Chain

That's July's contribution to our business. They're located in Philadelphia and elsewhere, in neighborhoods and localities that have not heretofore enjoyed the advantages offered by our uniquely liberal policy—FULLNESS OF QUALITY AND FAIRNESS OF PRICE.

In lengthening our chain there must be no weak, defective links; and it's very necessary to secure the combined advantages of suitable buildings and convenient locations in establishing our stores. We feel sure that each one of these new shops will fill a long-needed want in its particular locality, and we shall continue opening others to meet growing and insistent demand.

There must be something unusual back of all this; and we're putting this in print to convince the doubting Thomases (and all the Mrs. Thomases) and to settle beyond question the real helpfulness of THE AMERICAN STORES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. The House decision to consider only the groundwork now for further action on the prohibition amendment passed by the Senate late yesterday will go over to December probably. It is not likely action will be taken by the House before the new Congress convenes, said Representative Webb, House prohibition leader today. "This is due to the fact that the House has decided to take up our war measures. When it comes up, it will pass overwhelmingly."

It is and out of Congress, however, are the groundwork now for further action on the prohibition amendment. The campaign for ratification of the amendment, the doubtful States will be the cause of a heavy attack. "We will obtain the adoption of the prohibition amendment by the necessary number of States," E. C. Dinwiddie, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, said. "I will not mention the States in which we will begin our fight. But we will carry out ten States to the twenty-six all over or about to go dry by legislation."

It now appears likely, the amendment will come up for a vote until the December session, coming months probably because one of the fiercest prohibition battles in congressional history as the struggle to save their faltering.
